To get the index of the current location i'm using string locationName = "c,25.327974,50.946957" string[] values = locationName.Split(new char[] { ',' }, StringSplitOptions.RemoveEmptyEntries); double pointX = Convert.ToDouble(values[1]); double pointY = Convert.ToDouble(values[2]); double pointLat = Convert.ToDouble(values[0]); double pointLong = Convert.ToDouble(values[3]); What i need is to get the lat and long of the current location. I found this but it's in C++ and i can't make it work in C#. Is there something i can do to get the lat and long of the current location without being a C# programmer? A: What i need is to get the lat and long of the current location without being a C# programmer? You don't have to be a C# programmer to know how to get the LatLng from a string. Just parse out the Lat and Long from your address string, like so: var s = "25.327974,50.946957"; var lat = s.Substring(0, s.IndexOf(",")); var lng = s.Substring(s.IndexOf(",") + 1); var latLng = new double[] { Convert.ToDouble(lat), Convert.ToDouble(lng) }; Once you have the LatLng, you can create a Google.maps.MapOptions object, and set LatLng to equal the latLng variable you just created. var options = new Google.maps.MapOptions(); options.center = new google.

Shahnama MovieWith the development of portable electronic devices, such as smart phones, tablet PCs, portable game machines, and e-books, there is a need for liquid crystal display panels in which the thickness can be reduced as much as possible, as well as the viewing angle, brightness, power consumption, response speed, color rendering, and contrast ratio. Accordingly, a liquid crystal material, a liquid crystal display panel, a drive method, and a display are expected to be developed. Such a liquid crystal display panel is not free from a problem in that its contrast ratio is not sufficient. Contrast ratio is measured by dividing the brightness in the ON-state by that in the OFF-state. FIG. 14A is a schematic diagram explaining a relationship between the voltage applied to the liquid crystal and the transmittance of the liquid crystal. FIG. 14B shows the distribution of the voltage applied to the liquid crystal display device of FIG. 14A with respect to time. In the liquid crystal display device of FIG. 14A, after the application of an OFF-state voltage, the liquid crystal display panel is charged or restored to a pre-selected state. This is called a "restoring operation" in this description. The restoring operation is performed every frame, in the order of frames, for example, for each pixel (or a pixel row). After the restoring operation has been performed for all pixels (or all pixel rows), the screen is turned OFF and stays in that state until the next scanning period starts. After the power is turned on, there is a period in which the liquid crystal display panel is restored to the state prior to the application of the OFF-state voltage. This period in which the liquid crystal display panel is restored to the pre-selected state is the time period of the "initial display" of the liquid crystal display panel. The distribution of the voltage applied to the liquid crystal is the same as that in the e79caf774b
