The screen can be stretched to fit the number of characters in the "Macro" pane. A: OS X itself should shut down without problem after a set time. At one point it did not (and I learned this the hard way), but Apple worked around this with the introduction of the feature called "Sudden Termination" that allows the system to shut down abruptly if the user is typing or doing something else when a certain amount of time has passed, and that is more preferable to the constant "shutdown now" shutdown procedure. To be more precise, check out "Restart automatically after closing 2edc1e01e8
